

Electron Impact (EI) ionization:

Electron impact is the classical ionization technique in which gas phase sample molecules are ionized in collisions with high energy electrons produced by a heated filament. The ionized molecules can be fragmented by this mechanism, producing spectral information.

